

Write a Blog Post on an Eastern European Landmark

Due Friday 11th November

Your task is to write a post for our Eastern European Landmarks Blog about the landmark you have been given in the list. The list is saved in the Year 5 work folder and is on display in our class.

You will use the skills you have been shown and already practised.

You can look at an example post on 'Angel of the North' (the one you have already seen in our lesson).

Your post should include the following features:

- Title
- Short summary sentence
- Paragraphs of information and pictures mixed
- Sub-headings with information organised in the correct section
- Expert information which shows you have done some research, not just basic facts anybody might know
- You need to cite your source when you have got information from another website/book
- If you can, use pixabay for photos. Make sure you cite the source of any other picture you use. 'Citing sources' was the subject of some previous homework.

More advanced features (I will show you these in the lesson on Monday 7 Dec):

- Hyperlink to a webpage
- Embed a video

Start work on it now. Don't wait until next week's lesson.

Remember to 'Save as Draft' each time you add a bit more to it.

As with any piece of writing, you will use correct punctuation and spelling and get somebody else to proof read it before you 'publish it' for others to see.

Each post will need to be approved by me before others can see it. I may ask you to do some edits to improve it. Please make sure you and your proof reader have found all the typos.

If you have any questions, ask me at school or put a comment on our Year 5 blog and I will get an Alert.

When complete, I will ask Miss Redden, Year 6 pupils (who studied Eastern Europe when they were in Year 5) and our teachers (and the rest of our class of course) to view the blog and comment on your posts - some make them brilliant!
